A member of the Fourth Illuois Caralry,
Col. Dickey, just arrived from Savannah, brings the following account of a skirmish with the Confederates, in which the gallant Fourth bore honorable part. He says that on Sunday morning companies M, L and L Maj.
Bowman commanding, left their encampment at Pittaburgh, to make a reconnoissance in the vicinity of Purdy, which was being fortlned by the enemy.

They proceeded ten miles through forest and swamp, when they met a body of cavalry, numbering one hundred, concerning whose presence in that vicinity they were previously informed by a rebel who mistorsk our forces for lett, as described by prisoners, leave but little room for doubt. After this but little fighting was done. Occasionally a squadron would appear on the sammit of a distant hill, but a few rounds from our gans would disperse them. A portion of our company retook the two gans which had been captured a short time before. This closed the battle on the left, in which Girn. Sign's division was alone engaged. At one time we were entirely surrounded, and every tree and bush seemed swarming with secess, but happilly they were all cleared out, and our division left free to ecoperate with the others.

On the right, where the main portion of both armies were engaged, the booming of cannon and the rattle of small arms could be heard all day long. We then marched northeasterly to the Springfield road, which was througed with a moving mass of be lead to the right place. Entering a small clearing, we discovered yellow flags floating from each house, and surgeons standing around ready for the sad task assigned them. We entered the woods again, and had gone but a short distance when word was passed slong the line "look out for cavalry," and sure enough a squadron of horses without riders came tearing through the bush on each side of the road. Following them was another body with their riders, and it was difficult to tell which was most frightened, horses or men. All is the utmost confusion disappeared in the brush. One fellow cried out as he reased, "turn back; they'll give you hell." We learned that the 3d Iowa Cavalry crossed sield to support a canone, which was advancing towards where the enemy were supposed to be, and entering the woods on the north was received by a close and destructive for from all sides and from a consolat for Our battery remained in the open field with company E to support it, and being the only infantry in sight drew their whole fire. For a time the whilzing of balls, the bursting of shells all around us, was appalling, but we stood our ground, never giving an inch. A shell plunged into the centre of our company, tearing a limb, and mangling the body of one of the men. His shrieks, and the fear-ful storm of balls, appalled the stoutest hearts. Our batteries were not idle, and the cnemy's fire senaily slackened.

The 25th Hilmols were sent into the woods to our right, and advanced nearly to the position of their artillery, and encountered a body of the enemy ten times their own number. For a marter of an hour an uncessing roll of mucketry was heard in the woods, and the enemy were repeatedly scattered, but getting around to our right, the 25th were obliged to give ground. Our regiment advanced to the front, infur their batteries were silenced, to clear the woods, and had arrived within gun shot, when eight regiment advanced to the front, when eight regiments of the enemy were discovered in the timber, drawn up to receive us. Hnowing the conflict would be bloody and uncertain, it was ordered to the left out of range of the cannon, which opened upon them. Such a stangel of secessing a marked were removed to the street in a damaged con-dition. Dr. Eakins, who was a boarder in the house, while trying to rescue some articles of clothing which his wife had been unable to re-move from the room, found his eneape cut off, and was compelled to jump from the window of his room in the third story down upon the yerandah or awning over the sidewalk. Mr. of his room in the third story down upon the verandah or awning over the sidewalk. Mr. Fierce, the landlord of the Augusta, also escaped in a similar manner. Other similar hazardous and hairireadtheecapes and adventures occurred. When the entire building was one mass of fire, famed by a gale, as destructive, capricious and lawless as its judicial namesake, the heat was so litenses, and the fiames were so exettered, that the buildings west, and north, and east, and south of the Augusta Heuse, were soon enveloped in fire. The destroyer held "high carnival" for two hours, and was forced at last to cease further depredations, through the almost superhuman exerand uncertain, it was ordered to the left out of range of the camon, which opened upon them. Such a stampede of secesh as ensued, was sumsing to behold.

Large numbers of the enemy now appeared in the field on our right, forcing the 37th to retire, and expluring two of our guns. But the 13th Musouri and our battery Turled shot surance.

A move was also made upon our rear, but the 12th Missouri and 36th Illinois soon cleared them out, and none were left except in front, and their position was unknown. Company B and G were sent out as skirmishers, and when nearly to the woods, was received with a storm of musketry which sent death and destruction among them. A squad of Company B saw an officer ride up to the fence, and shot him dead from his saddle, and secured his gold watch, but was too warmly pressed to get his pistols. We have every reason to believe that this was Ben McCulloch. His dress, and the time and place where he fell, as described by prisoners, leave but little room for doubt. After this but little fighting was done. Occasionally a squadron would apinsurance.

Trade with the South

Editor Chicage Tribune:

You recommend in Saturday's paper that our citizens, make an effort to secure a portion of the Southern trade as fast as our troops clear the way, and that certain districts are already open for traffic. Now, I wish to know on what conditions that trade is open; whether there is a duty on all imports and exports to and from the seceded States. Also, whether Uncle Sam confiscates all sugars, cotton, tobacco, dcc., to be subject to his disposal.

There is no duty on geodificates all.

property of the people in the rebel States, except that of persons found actually bearing arms against the Government. Hence, the mate trade under permits from the command-er of the Western Department, would not be molested. It is doubtful, so far as we can now moissied. It is coustin, on as we seen an way judge, whether our citizens can as yet seen any considerable trade with the cities of Tennessee. It is hoped that matters will have a more properous and inviting appearance within the next month or two.

PROCEEDS OF THE TABLEAUX.—The new PROCEEDS OF THE TABLETY.—The net proceeds of the Exhibition of Tableaux and Pantomime, given by the Bunday School of the Church of the Redoemer, for the beneatt of our wounded soldiers, was $265.37, which amount has been placed at the disposal of the Ladles' Hospital Relief Society of this city. Well done, children and teachers of the Sabhath School!

PAYING SOLDIERS' FAMILIES. -Saturda PAYNO SOLDERS' FARTITES.—Saturday was a busy time at the rooms of the County Supervisors. A very large number of women, whose husbands are fighting the hattles of our country, appeared there to receive each her portion of money that has been donated for this philanthropic purposes. The heart of many a poor woman was gladdened by this timely distribution of funds, which reached an aggregate of nearly eight hundred dolllars.

POLICE MATTERS.—Very little of impor-tance transpired Saturday in the Police Court, the abominable condition of the and streets seeming to have mea of the horse cars and omnibuses. A few in-significant drunks, fights, and the petitest kind of larcenics, comprised the list of cases disposed of in the forenoon.

We have again the pleasure of calling atten-tion to the programme of this last concert of the accord series, to be given at Bryan Hall on Tuesday evening, March 25th.

This being the anniversary of the death of Boethoven, which took place at Vienna in 1827, the Society commemorate it by the porform-ance of his Fifth Symphony, which, viewed as a complete work in the unity of the various parts whereby the general interest is maintained through every movement, we conside as the most perfect of "the immortal nine.
